Upcoming Sunday Services
(services at 10:30 a.m.)

April 6: Loving the Stranger: An Interactive Service on Hospitality
Rev. Joy Atkinson, Worship Leader

How welcoming are we, as individuals, and as a religious community? The service will explore the spiritual discipline of hospitality, and how it may enhance the spirit of Fellowship and your own life.

April 13: What’s Needed
Joshua Searle-White, Worship Leader

Often in life we need to think toward the future, make plans and decide what to do. When we do that, it’s easy to get stuck in habitual ways of thinking and viewing things only through our own lens. But what if “what is needed here” were our guiding question rather than “what do we want?” or “what is our vision?” What greater sources of wisdom might we be able to open up to?

Joshua Searle-White is the Pacific Central District Executive. A long-time UU, he came to our district this past July after spending the past 18 years teaching at Allegheny College in Meadville, PA, where he was most recently Chair of the Psychology Department. He is best known in UU circles for his storytelling, including his book Magic Wanda’s Travel Emporium: Tales of Love, Hate, and Things in Between. He currently lives in Santa Cruz.

April 20: Easter Sunday: Finding Easter
Rev. Joy Atkinson, Worship Leader

What can “resurrection” possibly mean for Unitarian Universalists? Join us for a celebration of the season of Easter, renewal and hope.

April 27: Dreams as a Spiritual Practice
Katrina Martin, Worship Leader

In this service we will explore the connection between spirituality and dreams. Is it possible some of our dreams are messages from Spirit? Can dreams serve as a portal to explore the mysteries of life? Katrina will share some of her own spiritual dream experiences and provide examples of ways we can expand and deepen our spirituality through dreamwork.

Katrina Martin holds a masters degree in Consciousness and Transformative Studies and teaches classes on dreams locally. She lives in Oakland.
I once saw a Jules Feiffer cartoon, which pictures a sad-looking man, saying: “In the old days I was with this group that really had THE WORD. I fought like hell for them. But then this other group came along and showed me that the WORD of my group was shallow and ineffectual. They had a better WORD. So I quit the first group and joined up with those others. I fought like hell for them. But then someone came along and proved to me that there was no word, that what I should do is go off by myself as an individual and grow. So I quit the second group. Now what I do is sit by myself all day and grow.” Then the poor man moans: “I sure wish there were some others who felt the same way I do.” Too bad he had never heard of Unitarian Universalism! We, too, are not sure about THE word; rather, we hear and consider many words, many expressions of truth. The lonely cartoon character would grow a lot more in a community like ours than he would all by himself.

The theological diversity in our UU congregations makes our discussions and interactions lively, and because we gather in community, we can be the religious mavericks we are without being lonely, like the dejected cartoon character. Here at BFUU, as one of the exercises I led small groups through last fall illustrates, theological diversity is clearly present (see Cottage Meetings Write-Up on the BFUU website: click About, and then BFUU Members). I asked people to line themselves up along an imaginary continuum from theist to humanist (of course these categories beg for definition, and may not even be considered mutually exclusive, but just for illustration I had people define the categories for themselves). People placed themselves at many points along the humanist-theist line. Although the continuum was clearly more weighted toward the humanist side, people stood at many points on the line. Quite a few planted themselves firmly in the middle, and several went over to the “theist” side. I do this little exercise to make visually clear that, although we sometimes assume that all UUs have more or less similar beliefs, in fact theologically we are quite different from one another.

It’s wonderful, actually: On a given Sunday at the Fellowship, you may be sitting next to a liberal Christian, who’s sitting beside a Pagan, and in front of you is a practitioner of Zen Buddhism, while behind you is an atheist, and on your other side may be a theist, whose spouse is an agnostic. Here at BFUU you illustrate quite nicely that old UU adage, attributed to Transylvanian Unitarian leader Ferenc David: “We need not believe alike to love alike.”

If you would like to learn more about our free faith, and how you might go about joining the congregation as a voting member, come to an Inquirer’s meeting (the next one is after the service on March 30 in the Hall), or speak with me or a member of the Hospitality/Membership Committee. Or, let us know of your interest by visiting the Welcome Table. In May we will conduct a ceremony to introduce our newest members to the congregation.
Message From the Vice President

Gene Herman

The Board of Trustees has approved submitting an application to UUA-Boston for a Developmental Minister, and this information was presented to the congregation by President Virginia Hollins-Davidson at the Sunday, March 2 service. The position is expected to be three-fourths time and could last from three to five years. The five main areas of concern of the Developmental Minister will be:

1. To determine our mission and vision, and to whom we wish to minister.

2. Grow membership significantly by developing better community outreach/online presence, and by becoming a teaching lab for Starr King/Pacific School of Religion students.

3. Achieve financial sustainability through encouraging generosity in pledging, all types of planned giving and other aspects of general fiscal stewardship.

4. Broader congregational involvement in social justice, possibly through a focused local project.

5. Cultivating lay leadership, especially for committees such as Finance and Building and Grounds.

UUA will be sending us candidates, one at a time, for our review which will be done by a selection committee.

It is not cast in stone that we will find a viable candidate for this position; it is possible that there will be an Executive Director search implemented as well. More about that next month.

As your outgoing Stewardship Chair I leave office in about the same state as I entered: with 49 pledging members, 9 friends and approximately $27,000 dollars in annual pledges.

I am certain that there is a Fellowship member who can pick up the hat for the Stewardship Chair and help move BFUU fiscally forward.

Please speak to Virginia, Abbot or myself about picking up and wearing this vitally important hat.

Finally, as my last plea from Stewardship, please take note that the Fellowship is committed to sending $60 dollars per member as dues to the UUA, and $26 dollars per member as dues to PCD, a total of $86 per member annually. If you have not pledged this amount please consider adjusting your pledge upward to at least $86 per year so that the Fellowship does not have to subsidize your membership.

May the blessings of spring shine upon you…in Fellowship.

Gene B. Herman

Country Joe McDonald straddles the two polar events of the ‘60s: Woodstock and the Vietnam War. The first Country Joe and the Fish record was released in 1965 in time for the Vietnam Day Teach-In anti-war protest in Berkeley. He sang one of the great anthems of the era, “I-Feel-Like-I’m-Fixin’-to-Die Rag,” to an audience of a half-million at the Woodstock Arts and Music Festival in 1969.

Hali Hammer opens

Well-versed in an assortment of moods and styles, Hali Hammer is an award-winning singer-songwriter who enjoys writing and playing a wide variety of music. She has sung and played for peace and political causes for more than four decades and is an active member of Freedom Song Network and Occupella.
