Upcoming Worship Services

November 3: An Unsettling Force, the Revival of Class Organizing Millie Phillips (she/her), Guest Worship Leader

The past several years have demonstrated an enthusiastic revival of organizing on the basis of class. From teachers unable to afford to live where they work to the new Poor Peoples Campaign reintroducing the spirit and tactics of the Civil Rights Movement, more and more of us are realizing that economic injustice is entwined at the roots of all our social problems. Frankly, many UUs have been a bit slow to engage in this “new” approach. Millie will discuss why UUs need to get on board practically, ethically, and spiritually.

November 10: Patience & Kelly visit BFUU for a Zimbabwean themed service
Kelly Takunda Orphan (she/her), Guest Speaker

Kelly will tell us about her musical journey and how it moved her spirit to embrace Zimbabwean music and how it transformed her and the music community here in the Bay Area. We have the honor of meeting Patience Mujeri who is visiting here from Zimbabwe. Patience will share her Zimbabwean culture and music.

November 17: Joy in the Darkness
Claire Eustace (she/her), Worship Leader

It is said that joy and sorrow are two sides of the same coin. In this service we will delve into the mystery of what brings us joy and how to access it in our lives. We will move, sing, and be still as we contemplate joy in the short days of this season.

November 24: Why Can’t Religion and Evolution Just Get Along?
Rev. Dr. Carrie Knowles (she/her), Worship Leader

One hundred and sixty years ago today, Charles Darwin’s world-changing book, “On the Origin of Species,” was published in England. Rev. Dr. Carrie Knowles surveys the almost endless struggle over time between conservative religious doctrine and the careful, caring science that upended old assumptions with the power of truth.
President's Corner

Please join us in welcoming our new Community Minister to BFUU, the Reverend Tom McAninley! Tom is a longtime BFUU member, an ordained minister, and the first participant of our 3-year community minister incubator.

Tom, we look forward to the next three years and beyond in this wonderful community partnership. So much love and admiration for your contribution to BFUU and to the world.

We are also pleased to acknowledge Simone Chiodini as an Aspirant and proud to be part of her path to ministry.

With gratitude and excitement,
Ira Armstrong on behalf of the BFUU Board

Butterfly Effect: Migration is Beautiful

BFUU is displaying a social justice artwork in the foyer of Fellowship Hall. The Butterfly Effect: Migration is Beautiful project is an art and activism project led by youth in the Bay Area. They are leading a movement to create a visual representation that will raise awareness about the 15,000 immigrant children who have been and are currently in US detention and to inspire our community to take action to end child detention permanently. They are working with the community to make butterflies out of recycled and upcycled materials. Butterflies will be displayed on strings hanging from old bike wheels, and displayed in public institutions including libraries, hospitals, schools, and city halls to raise awareness of children in detention.

Please join them at Lake Merritt Amphitheater on Saturday, November 16th, from 3-4 pm for a youth led rally to stand in solidarity with migrant children in detention. If you can attend, and have made them, please bring your butterflies! Check out their Facebook event for additional details! https://www.facebook.com/events/1000021020340277/

Their key partners are the Alphabet Rockers, Destiny Arts Center, The Center for Cultural Power (formerly CultureStrike) and Tsuru for Solidarity. The line “migration is beautiful” comes from the Center for Cultural Power. Please see more information about this organization at: https://butterflyeffectmigration.org/

Yom Kippur connections

Suddenly I’m reading Jack Micheline’s poem “Souls” to his Grandpa Louie found the tiny handmade booklet hidden between big hard-backed tomes an exquisite work of art rough-textured and wildly colored signed by Jack #48 in an edition of 200
pieces of his paintings inside a bumpy, tawny-colored cover like Jacob’s coat of many colors.

There lay Jack’s passionate poem to Grandpa Louie written on Yom Kippur in 1957 which is this week, but without the calendar
I would not have remembered and my long-lost half-brother Jaymie son of our father Henry Smolens grandson of Ozer Smolenskin called me this week to say “Remember me?
I’m your brother by Henry’s third marriage.”

And I found myself weeping with memories of the long lost
the barely known Ozer and Henry and Jaymie three generations of my Jewish family and Jack Micheline
another Russian Jew
who pushed a truck in New York’s garment center when he was Harvey Silver a radical activist worker before he morphed into Micheline the poet and painter.

And I wept for myself and my Jewish heritage on Yom Kippur when I picked up Jack Micheline’s tiny handmade book his passionate poem “Souls” dedicated to his Grandpa Louie wanderer, lover of life, lost soul like all of us.

Music Travels!

While BFUU’s Music Director Dr. Susan was away on vacation, she went to see family in Hawaii and while she was there also visited the First Unitarian Church of Honolulu (UU Honolulu) that was originally founded as a fellowship in 1952. During the Sunday service, she played a song by Kate Wolf about nature and California on her ukulele and was warmly greeted with an orchid lei. Such island hospitality!

Be ready to sing and move a bit! We’ll also sing these joyous songs during the Sunday service on November 10, where Kelly will tell us about her musical journey and how it moved her spirit to embrace African music and incorporate it into her life and community.
