September 5: Kith and Kin: How we Become We and they Become They
Rev. Marsh Agobert (he/him)
In Chicago, I live in a vast neighborhood that is largely populated, with some increasing diversity, by conservative African-Americans. In Oakland, I live in a community that is mildly racially diverse and AND made up of both conservative and liberal people. What do we mean by diversity? Is it something we really want or is it the idea that we find attractive?

September 12: Side With Love
Douglas Chambers (he/him) & Kathy Riehle (she/her), Worship Coordinators
Ours is a theology of engagement. We draw inspiration and truth from experiencing each other and the world around us. In doing so, we witness both the beauty and the brokenness of our larger community and environment. Today, we will explore the creation of the UU Side With Love public witness campaign (with its famous golden yellow t-shirts), the twists and turns and controversies of history, and our own personal relationships to activism.

September 19: Sing In My Heart: Celebrations and Rituals
Eva Doucette (she/her), Worship Coordinator
One way Unitarian Universalist spirituality can be expressed is in the liturgies, ceremonies, and worship services we create. Rituals and celebrations are ways to appreciate life, face grief and sorrow, share joy and gratitude, and deepen relationships and core commitments. They add meaning and purpose to major life events, help us embrace change, help us express important emotions, including love and grief. They can help build community. And they can enhance personal connections with the sacred, with the Spirit of Life. Join us as we explore creating our ritual life together.

September 26: Chocolate! Sacred, Sinful or Salubrious?
Rev. Dr. Carrie Knowles (she/her)
Rev. Dr. Carrie Knowles shares the history of cocoa as the gift of the gods, as the temptation to sinful addiction, and what we know today of its contribution to mental health.

How Are We Doing?

Last (church) year, I strongly suggested that we would do well to find a way to avoid the civil war that is growing beneath the surface of our collective thin skin. Like an abscess, it continues to fester. I haven’t found a way to raise this prospect without sounding like a conspiracy theorist, which is a negative way of saying, well, a conspiracy theorist.

We talked about some of the events that preceded our first such conflict that brewed roughly 160 years ago, our Civil War. That may seem like a long time, but it’s just long enough to rally forces to see if this might be an age, once again ripe for planting a new flag on a revised nation. A more recent effort rolled out of California when we sent Governor Reagan to the White House. Not long before that, in 1964, Goldwater had changed the last name of that movement from “Confederates” to “Conservatives.” That simple change was a deadly movement toward dismantling FDR’s New Deal and Eisenhower’s Middle Way. These national movements were, at the time, positioned as Communist plots, and the great divide was again alive and well.

This year the Confederate battle flag advanced to the U.S. Capitol. The insurrectionists planted it there for the first time in U.S. history, and this is how wars are designed and won, with careful planning and infinite patience. At some level, we must see the striking correlation between what has been and what is attempting to become. But, of course, some of these steps are executed in reverse. Voter suppression of “mudsill” people is currently the critical step necessary to get those pesky lessers ‘back in their place.’
One mistake we make in understanding who is who in the larger picture is a result of not making a distinction between Republicans, Conservatives, Oligarchs, and extremist movements. As a result, we lump many people together, even though they represent various perspectives and positions. It is an intentional confusion established by “The Oligarchs” (or Plutocrats, if you prefer.) The Oligarchs have spent the past 40 years (the Reagan version of Movement Conservatism) perfecting the control of their “mudsills,” and they are good at it, though they may be losing some ground at this moment. Therefore, this IS a critical moment in the experiment of democracy.

An important point to remember here is that these long-running strategies and tactics divide us as a nation. These strategies provide a relatively small group of individuals a path to conquer us, as we choose to be divided by our good vs. evil news bureaus.

I suggest bringing our current circumstance into focus. For the last year I’ve been reading the highly engaging writing of historian Heather Cox Richardson¹ as well as her nightly letters and twice a week talks on politics and history. I have gained a very clear and living understanding of where we are today and how we got here. Please pay close attention to how the South moved into the West, which will reveal how Thomas Starr King’s work and ultimate sacrifice were so important, and why it is returning to us now.

I invite you to join me in becoming a part of a much needed innovative approach to being a part of the solution, the movement underway in our country, to claim democracy, and the right for all people to life, liberty, and our pursuit of happiness.

Rev. Marsh

¹The Heather Cox Richardson Facebook Page houses her nightly letters (“Letters From an American”) and her twice weekly live talks. In recent months, our Worship Services Committee created and coordinated a series of worship services based on the UUA Tapestry of Faith adult religious education curricula, “The New UU” and “Spirit of Life.” So many in our fellowship helped! Thanks to all who participated in these lively, inspiring, and fun Worship Services! There will be more to come!

Baxter

Ole mister sleepy head
Especially anywhere on your bed
Or flat out on your unfinished puzzle
Never have to put on a muzzle
True Baxter does go outside
Lets try napping in the mint or thyme
Oh wait there’s a bird to catch
My Boss thinks killing a bird is a crime
But our feline design Is to catch something
Plus the Boss is always catching fish
Tossing me lots of bits and pieces
Never me catching the big brass ring
I know I’ll bring it home upstairs to the Boss
He’ll be so happy
To have a live bird on hand
You still don’t understand
I’m a cat we catch things
Ok all is forgiven
I’ll take the live thingy back outside
Let him go
My turn now
I just hop up where
I can have my head scratched

And neck rubbed

Memo from the Office

RE: Update on BFUU Office Activities:
I’ve missed seeing you in person, but I’m glad we’re all keeping as safe as possible. I’m feeling very thankful for what we still have and share.

What is your Office Admin doing these days? I still update the website, prepare and send the ENews and Worship Service reminder, process and track pledge and plate payments, pick up the mail, deposit checks, edit worship service videos for posting (when appropriate), prep and check the Order of Service (the Worship Service Coordinators generally update the Orders these days!), prepare and distribute the newsletter, and prep the check requests for shared plate partners.

In addition to these regular tasks, I have a few projects going on: I’ve started updating the BFUU Directory to distribute within the next few weeks. I’m working with Luna to make the Board Minutes available on line. I’m testing demos of church management systems for the Board, Rev. Marsh, and the Membership Committee. Power Church is great, but doesn’t have the ability for members to directly access their contact info and contribution history - and we’d like that! I’ve also been working with Abbot to get our office computers updated. We are still hoping to hire an IT Consultant, but that’s on back burner as our tech needs are few for the moment.

I’m very excited and grateful to have recently joined the Reopening Task Force with Deborah, Ben, Sharon, Mike, and Kathy. We are evaluating the ever-changing information and working together to help the Board determine what is best for the whole BFUU community.

Rentals: BFUU has lost most of its rental income, but we are grateful that we have been able to work with some of our renters to our mutual benefit. The Finance Committee worked with the New School to reduce their rent, so they can continue to provide the vital service of childcare at a reduced capacity and keep our buildings in use. Deborah worked with BFUU Sexton Shae to bring back three of our ongoing renter groups in July. These small groups have sit-down meetings only (no movement or singing), they meet at times when the rest of the building is empty and when Shae can be on site, and they agreed to 50% room capacity, self-screening, masks, distancing, and open windows. The fees they pay cover the costs, but not much more than that. They are glad that they can safely hold their supportive group meetings in the same space they have been using for many years. We are hoping that working with these groups gives us the experience to move forward with other groups when it’s safe to do so. We expect that once it’s safer (hopefully early 2022?), we can open to other small discussion groups, then larger groups, then movement/singing groups and large events.

BFUU Building Use: A few staff and committee Chairs venture on site as needed. We pick up the mail, print and sign checks, work on the buildings and grounds (yay to Abbot for keeping the solar project moving!), locate and file documents – whatever needs to happen on site to keep us running smoothly. We hope to open to BFUU groups in early/mid 2022 in the same rough order as the rentals described above, though the timing is still uncertain. We expect Worship Service to be one of the last events to resume on location, because it involves singing and is open to the public. We aren’t sure if we’ll have the capacity to manage hybrid events, but we’re looking into what would be needed technologically and in terms of staff/volunteers because we’d really like to continue to share worship with congregants who can’t join us in person.

Hope to see you all soon, even if only virtually for now,

Susan Macke
